Digital Scholarship and Skills Module Assessment: Hilary Term 2018

PhD candidates attending the Digital Scholarship and Skills Module workshop series may do so on either an 'a la carte' (where participants have an interest in a single or multiple sessions), or as a 5 ECTS module to be applied to the thought course requirements in a structured PhD. Details of the assessment requirements are as follows:

5 ETCS = 100 student effort hours

To accrue the 5 ECTS, participants will be expected to attend each of the four workshops and to complete the course assessments. Workshop participation will be assessed as a module in the following manner:

- A. Participation in all four workshops: 16 contact hours (40% contribution to final mark).
- B. A series of reflective blog posts (up to 500 words each) on each of the workshops. This assessment requires writing up to a maximum of 2000 words: (25% contribution to final mark)
BP1 due 27/02 (Managing Digital Sources in the Humanities), BP2 due 27/03 (Introduction with Text Analysis with R), BP3 due 03/04 (Putting Your Humanities Content Online), BP4 due 17/04 (Defining Digital Humanities).
- C. Literature review (up to 1500 words) of one of the topics covered in the workshop series: (15% contribution to final mark) due 27/04.
- D. Individual 7 min lightning presentation detailing how one of the workshop topics could be applied to your research: (20% contribution to final mark) date to be confirmed.
